

THE CASE OF THE
RINGTAIL POSSUM

Something is stirring. A bunch of ringtail possums have disappeared. Students from Ranowa High School are trying to discover this mysterious disappearance. Charlie Kerr from the team of high school students trying to locate the possums says "We are trying everything to find these native animals. They mean everything to us.". The team, consisting of five students, have been searching for a week now, but haven't found anything. If they aren't found by the end of the month, this will become a major search. We sure don't want a major search for these native and beautiful animal. Locals are still baffled about this mysterious disappearance. One local resident, Nicholas Vaughan, says "I'm in shock. I just don't know what has happened.". Local police are still trying to find out what has really happened. Could they have been kidnapped? Could they have just wandered off? Or could they have eaten something nasty? The answer remains a mystery.

In other news, a rabid bunny rabbit is freaking out the locals. The six year old male is beginning to go feral. His owner, Steven James, is concerned for his little bunny. "I've had him for so long and it's a shame to see him going feral.". Local police are trying to keep him under control. Matthew Vaughan, Ace Reporter, Signing Out.
